

Monitoring Children's Rights Blended learning course

Self-directed e-course + intensive workshop
Brussels, 13-15 October 2014

Monitoring Children's Rights (E04314-blended-BRU)

This blended learning training program is intended for child rights practitioners, children's advocates and child-related professionals seeking to gain a practical understanding of the concept and practice of monitoring children's rights as a means of strengthening programming and furthering advocacy activities that aim to promote and protect children's rights.

Participants will learn about methodologies for carrying out monitoring (respecting child participation), the basics of choosing or constructing a children's rights indicator, and the application of results for improving the promotion and protection of the rights of the child. The training will include a blend of theoretical materials and case studies that draw from a range of issues including child survival and health, education and development, child contact with the law, and child abuse and situations of exploitation.

Learning format

This course uses a blended learning methodology and consists of several learning phases:

1. Self-directed e-course on the children's rights framework, September 2014 (to be completed prior to the workshop)
2. Intensive three-day workshop in Brussels, 13-15 October 2014
3. Follow up and support through HREA's Community of Practice for child rights practitioners

Self-directed e-course on the child rights framework

The self-directed, self-paced e-course provides a solid introduction to the child rights framework and the institutions and mechanisms that serve to fulfill the rights of children. The e-course combines text with rich multimedia, including videos and podcasts. Knowledge checks reinforce the information learned. Assignments engage participants to solve specific problems. Approximately five hours of learning.

Agenda of the workshop in Brussels, 13-15 October 2014

Day 1: The Monitoring Concept; Children's Rights Indicators

Day 2: Monitoring the Situation of Specific Groups of Children; Monitoring Specific Rights of a Child

Day 3: Preparation of Monitoring Reports and Advocacy

The training is based on a participatory, active learning approach with an emphasis on peer-to-peer learning. Case studies draw from a range of scenarios related to child survival and health, education and development, child contact with the law, and child abuse and situations of exploitation. Through a series of interactive workshops, participants develop practical skills to ensure children are considered across all stages of the monitoring cycle. Participants are introduced to indicator systems and the basics of choosing or constructing a children's rights indicator and gain an understanding of the procedures for appraisal, selection, development, and analysis of monitoring approaches.

The training will take place from 09h00-17h00 each day and will consist of a series of interactive workshops. The training will be held in English.

Participants

The Monitoring Children's Rights course is intended for child rights staff of NGOs, intergovernmental and government agencies, children's advocates and child-related professionals.

Costs

The course tuition fee is €545, this includes registration fee, tuition for the e-learning course and workshop, coffee/tea breaks, lunches. The fee does not include accommodation or travel, which will have to be arranged by participants themselves. An early bird registration fee of €495 is available until 1 September 2014.

For more detailed information and online registration:

www.hrea.org/monitoring-child-rights

About HREA

Human Rights Education Associates (HREA) is an international non-governmental organisation registered as a charity in the Netherlands and a 501(c)3 tax-exempt non-profit in the United States and has consultative status with the United Nations. HREA is one of the leading organisations worldwide dedicated to education and training about and for human rights. Each year HREA trains thousands of development workers, educators, human rights defenders, legal and media professionals around the world. HREA's partners, clients and donors include, among others, Amnesty International, the Council of Europe, Ford Foundation, the Open Society Foundations, Plan International, UNICEF, the University for Peace, War Child Holland, World Vision and the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR).